Glossary

Islamic Penal Code

The Islamic Penal Code of Iran is the set of criminal laws in the Islamic Republic of Iran¹

Azeri, Azerbaijani, or Azerbaijani Turk

In the current report, we use "Azerbaijani" to refer to the people living in the Azerbaijan region of Iran. Azerbaijan region of Iran is primarily populated by Turks. "Azerbaijani Turks" refer to the Turkic population of Azerbaijan.

The term "Azeri" is widely used in international media and literature, referring to the people of the Republic of Azerbaijan and the Azerbaijani population of Iran. However, Azerbaijanis prefer not to use the term "Azeri" because it has been historically used negatively as a means for assimilation by Iran and the Soviet Union's central governments. In Persian and Russian political literature, the term "Azeri" refers to so-called "Turkified people living in Azerbaijan." Alongside being racist and carrying anti-Turk sentiment, it attempts to denude the Azerbaijanis from their identity and assimilate them into a different culture. Thus, this report refrains from using the pejorative term "Azeri." "Azerbaijani Turks" is another term commonly used to emphasize the ethnic root.

freely choose and express their identity, including nationality and ethnicity, without discrimination. Therefore we will use Azerbaijani or Azerbaijani Turk (referring to the ethnic origin) to refer to the Azerbaijani population of Iran.

This report also includes the list of Kurdish people living in a part of the west-Azerbaijan province of Iran. For this reason, the term Azerbaijani is used as an umbrella term instead of Azerbaijani Turk to refer to the people with different ethnic backgrounds living in the Azerbaijani regions of Iran.

Criminal Code of Procedure

The criminal procedure of the Islamic Republic of Iran is a set of regulations that are used to detect crime, prosecute the accused, conduct preliminary investigations, mediation, the procedure, issuance of verdicts, ways of protesting the votes, judicial organization, execution of judicial decisions, determining the duties and powers of judicial authorities and Judicial officers². The Code of Criminal Procedure was passed in April 2014 and entered into force in June 2015

Ta'zir

Discretionary punishment for crimes for which fixed penalties are not provided in Islamic law. The charges are entirely arbitrary and up to the judge.

Basij

Paramilitary volunteers forces of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps

Corruption on earth

The offense of "corruption on earth" is based on Article 286 of the Islamic Penal Code³

The offense of "enmity against God" is based on Article 279 of the Islamic Penal Code⁴

Seventh and Fourth ceremony

In Islam, the 7th and 40th days are significant after the death of a loved one. During this time, the family gathers for prayers and mourning of the deceased in the cemetery.

Free hugs campaign

The free hugs campaign was an initiative of protesters in Iran to offer free hugs to the grieving people of Iran during the 2022 protests⁵.

Supreme Leader's Amnesty order

On February 9, 2023, Ali Khamenei signed an order to conditionally pardon the arrested and imprisoned protesters⁶. The authority to pardon prisoners is given to the leader of Iran by article 110 of the Iranian constitution.

Introduction

The large-scale protests raged in Iran after the death in custody of Mahsa Jina Amini on September 16, 2022.

The protests quickly spread nationwide, and only in the first days did about 100 cities and towns join the protests. Although the protests were triggered by violating women's rights regarding mandatory hijab, many factors, such as economic hardship and lack of freedom of speech, contributed to the protests. As in the years before, the Iranian government's approach to peaceful protests was suppression with disproportionate measures, which resulted in the death of many protesters. The protests lasted more than 100 days. During this period, the intelligence and security agents, IRGC, and Basij forces committed violations of various human rights despite the protesters having the right to peaceful protests. Countrywide, more than 500 protesters died, and more than 80000 were arrested. However, the human rights groups could only identify 4920 victims, from which 969 confirmed cases were Azerbaijanis. The number of arrests among Azerbaijanis was significantly higher than the confirmed cases. According to trusted sources, the number of arrests in the first weeks of the protests in Tabriz and Zanzan, two major cities of Azerbaijan, was more than 3000 individuals. Figure 2.1 depicts the number of arrests by provinces. East and west Azerbaijan, Ardabil, Zanzan, Qazvin, and part of Hamadan provinces are considered Azerbaijan mainly populated by Azerbaijani Turks. As shown in figure 2.1, Azerbaijan was among one of the regions in which number of arrests was very high.

The regions populated by ethnic groups were the primary target of the regime's forces. Azerbaijan, Baluchistan, and Kurdistan have experienced the harshest crack-down by the regime. For instance, only Balochis account for more than %25 of the death tolls. All non-

Persian Ethnic groups comprise more than %40 of the confirmed death toll. This magnitude is possibly higher than reported as we could not confirm the identity of the many victims living in the central regions of Iran. Figure 2.2 indicates the share of non-Persian groups among the victims. Approximately %65 of the victims belong to ethnic groups where peaceful protests are considered a threat to the territorial integrity of Iran by the centralist government. Therefore, the suppression of the protests and the number of victims are significantly higher in those regions.

Many human rights principles were violated during the protests, especially women's and children's rights. For example, according to the trusted observations and evidence, the Islamic Republic government violated child rights by abusing underaged kids as a Basij volunteer paramilitary force to suppress the protests. Mandating underaged students to attend pro-government rallies and arresting, torturing, and expelling disobedient students from schools are also examples of children right's violations that the Iranian government widely practices during the protests. Above all, according to the Iranian Human Rights Organization's statistics and UN Special Rapporteur on human rights in Iran,

Figure 2.2: Central versus non-Central regions. The non-central region includes areas populated by Azerbaijani Turks, Kurds, Arabs, Turkmen, Balochis, and Talesh ethnic groups.

Mr. Javed Rahman, the security forces shot at least 64 underaged protesters dead¹. More than 10% of the confirmed death cases of underaged protesters were Azerbaijani. Some sources stated that the underaged group accounts for more than 30% of all detainees.

Highlights

- Balochis account for more than 25% of the death tolls.
- non-Persian Ethnic groups comprise more than 40% of the confirmed cases.
- Approximately 65% of the victims belong to ethnic groups.

The Islamic Republic of Iran's forces unprecedentedly targeted women during the 2022 protests. This is one of the major distinguishing facts that differentiate this protest from the protests in the previous year. The number of dead and detained women protesters was significantly high. The share of minority women among dead and detained women protesters is significantly higher. The high number of ethnically Azerbaijani Turk women arrested during the 2022 protests in Iran is exceptional, as previously, there were not many arrests of women in demonstrations. However, most human rights reports rarely mention the minority aspects of these protests.

Figure 2.3 compares the percentage of female victims in the Azerbaijan region with the nationwide share of female victims. The chart shows that the share of female victims nationwide is approximately %17, which is unprecedented. However, this share is almost %23 among Azerbaijanis. This provides evidence for a higher share of minority women among the victims and high female participation of females in the Azerbaijan region compared to the whole country.

Lastly, we explore the share of civil activists among the detainees. To prevent the rapid spread of the protests, the intelligence forces arrested many civil and political activists in the Azerbaijani cities, even those who did not participate.

Figure 2.4 provides evidence of the Islamic Republic of Iran's approach toward civil and political activists among ethnic groups. While the share of activist detainees is approximately %7 nationwide, the share of activist arrests is approximately %21 among Azerbaijanis. Therefore, our records confirm that the Iranian government's measurement was harsher in the Azerbaijan region. The same is true for the other ethnic groups as well.

Highlights

- Child detainees accounted for more than %30 of all arrested protesters.
- At least 64 children were shot dead by the security forces. More than %10 were Azerbaijani Turks.
- The share of female victims nationwide is approximately %17. However, this share is almost %23 among Azerbaijanis.
- The share of activist detainees is approximately %7 nationwide. This share is approximately %21 among Azerbaijanis. Therefore, our records confirm that the Iranian government's measurement was harsher in the Azerbaijan region. The same is true for the other ethnic groups as well.

The human rights violations by Iranian officials are not limited to mistreatment during the arrests and interrogations. Unfair and unlawful court trials, arbitrary charges with no evidence or warrant, limiting the accused's access to any lawyer, extended detention, privacy violations, and excessive charges are all examples of common human rights violations committed during the proceedings by the judicial authorities.

The current report concentrates on various aspects of the protests, including targeting underaged victims of violence and minority women, violations of fair trial and the detention of lawyers, instances of torture and forced confessions, and the disproportionate use of force by security forces. The report also addresses the government's arbitrary detention of protesters and the restrictions on the right to peaceful assembly, data access, and the internet. The report then provides information on the 2023 amnesty order issued by Islamic Republic's leader. Furthermore, the report examines the government's arbitrary deprivation of life and ethnic discrimination against citizens in the Azerbaijani regions of Iran. Finally, the report indicates the protesters' sentencing and provides information about their arrests.

This report covers the human rights violations in the Azerbaijan region of Iran with special attention on the violations of ethnic, women, and children's rights. The findings in this report demonstrate a severe breach of international human rights standards and raise significant concerns about the Iranian government's commitment to upholding basic human rights.

Human Rights Violations

3.1 Underaged victims of violence in Iran

The United Nations General Assembly approved the convention on the Rights of the Child in 1989, which requires all member states who accept this treaty to preserve and dignify the human personality and create a suitable cultural environment to protect and secure special care before and after childbirth. The treaty is binding for all the member states.

In February 1994, the Islamic Republic of Iran joined the treaty after approving the contents and became one of the countries committed to the treaty's provisions. Therefore, the Islamic Republic of Iran has an international responsibility and obligation as a member country. Besides this, article 9 of the Civil Code of the Islamic Republic of Iran states: the provisions of the agreements concluded between the government of Iran, and the other countries are considered in force by the constitution of the Islamic Republic of Iran. As a result, with the accession of the government of Iran to the mentioned convention, the agreement also becomes a valid domestic law.

Article 1 of the Convention on children's Rights states that all under 18s are considered a child and subject to the convention. However, articles 88 to 91 of the Islamic Penal Code, approved in 2014, differentiate children aged 9 to 15 from the ones aged 15 to 18 years old in terms of punishment. Still, the age of full criminal responsibility is considered 18 years old.

By examining the social and judicial behavior of the officials of the Islamic Republic of Iran, it can be seen that many of the convention's principles on the Rights of the Child (UNICEF) are subjected to anti-human rights policies. For instance, article 37 of the convention states that the member countries accepted to implement the following measures:

- No child should be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhumane, or any act against human dignity. The death penalty or life imprisonment without the possibility of parole cannot be applied to children under 18s.
- No child should be illegally and arbitrarily imprisoned. Arresting, detaining, or imprisoning a child should be under the law and considered a last resort for the shortest possible time.
- Due to the inherent status of a human being, a child in prison should be treated humanely and with respect in such a way that the needs of their age are considered. Children in prison, in particular, should be separated from adults unless this is contrary to the child's best interests. Except in exceptional circumstances, the child can contact his family through letters and visits.
- Every imprisoned child should have the right to quick access to legal advice or other necessary assistance and the right to protest the legitimacy of their imprisonment before the court or other competent, independent, and impartial authorities and to make quick decisions in such cases.

However, after the start of peaceful protests in Iran that took place in September 2022 after the morality police murdered Ms. Jina Mahsa Amini, many principles of human and also children's rights were violated. According to the observations and undeniable evidence, the Islamic Republic government abused children and students through the Basij volunteer military force^{1, 2}, using them to repress the protests as human shields and child soldiers³. Additionally, the officials threatened to deduct school grades if they did not participate in pro-government rallies. This clearly violates children's rights in imposing opinions and beliefs of a particular group⁴.

On the other hand, there are reports showing arrests, torture, and expel of students and children who did not support the Iranian government simply because they have different cultural and political opinions. In many detention cases, even the children's parents were unaware of their condition. Some girls and boys have been raped and assaulted in illegal detention centers⁵. Court procedures and proceedings were held without the permission of the child's parents to use a lawyer or legal advisor. In some cases, accused children have been faced with illegal rulings by the judges. In many instances of the arrest of children and, of course, other detainees as well, the judges have refused to accept bail, which resulted in the process being prolonged, leading to severe mental and physical injuries to children and deprivation of education. In the case of Arshia Emamgolizadeh, a 16-year-old teenager from the city of Alamdar in East Azerbaijan, who was arrested during the uprisings over the death of Jina Mahsa Amini and was killed on November 28, 2022, and the government, despite his illegal arrest and acts of violence leading to his death denies this case. Still, many pieces of evidence and news show that the government is responsible for his murder⁶.

Attila Arfaei, a 16-year-old boy from Tabriz, who was arrested on 21 September 1401, at the same time when the street protests in Tabriz were happening, was severely tortured by the intelligence interrogators of Tabriz. He was arrested by the security forces and transferred to Tabriz Islamic Revolutionary Guards Corps (IRGC) intelligence detention center for interrogation and filing of his case. Reports from the close relatives of Arfaei's arrest indicate that he was arrested near Shariati Street (Shahnaz), violently by IRGC security forces.

Another example is the murder of Kian Pirmalak, a 9-year-old boy living in Izeh in Khuzestan, who was shot dead by the agents of the Islamic Republic of Iran on November 16, 2022⁷.

There are no accurate statistics about the deaths and arrests of children in the uprising of 2022. Still, according to the Iranian Human Rights Organization statistics, among the 476 dead protestors, 64 were children⁸. Additionally, the number of child detainees is very high, and at least 30% are children⁹.

3.2 Minority women

Iran is a multi-ethnic and multi-religious country where people from different ethnic groups live together. However, the non-Persian ethnic groups in Iran, including Azerbaijani Turks, Kurds, Baluchis, and Arabs, have long faced discrimination and marginalization from the central government. Women belonging to these minority ethnic groups are particularly vulnerable, as they face intersectional discrimination based on their gender, ethnicity, and religion. First, due to the structural gender discrimination in the country's laws. Secondly, due to the discriminatory view of the central government towards the regions populated with non-Persian ethnic areas, and thirdly, which in turn is the result of the strange combination of the two discriminations mentioned above, The patriarchal culture that has locked women in the narrow framework of identity walls and, under the pretext of defending identity and culture. Restrictive societal and family norms, honor killings, and the concept of "widows" are only a few of these factors.

Women's rights activists, as well as members of the mainstream Persian media and civil society bodies outside Iran, are mostly too busy raising the generally neglected rights of Iranian women on behalf of the urban middle class, for whom the problems specific to women of religious and ethnic minorities are not very important. The systemic discrimination of women by state law on one side and the negligence of the problems of minority women by the relatively privileged upper-class women's rights activists and media left the minority women in Iran wholly ignored.

The disproportionate focus of social media activists and media on the presence of women in the stadium ¹⁰ while minority women were not allowed to stadiums in periphery regions, refusal of mainstream Persian media to be the voice of the death of 5 minority women burning in a bus because of the lack of heating facilities and negligence of government authorities ¹¹ are only a few examples of how minority women are going through extra discrimination.

During the 2022 protests, most of those who died were reportedly from ethnically minoritized provinces. Like many other regions of Iran, sizeable protests were held in big and small cities of Azerbaijani provinces of Iran¹². The high number of ethnically Azerbaijani Turk women arrested during the 2022 protests in Iran is exceptional, as previously, there were not many arrests of women in protests. This suggests that the Iranian government has increased its crackdown on minority women, who are already vulnerable to intersectional discrimination.

¹¹Read more details

¹²The Protests in Iran and Azerbaijani Turk Civil Rights Activists

The importance of representation can be a literal difference in life and death for minority women. Neda Bayat¹³, a teenager arrested in Zanjan, was taken into custody in plain clothes. The latest video of her is when she was inhumanely and violently taken into a police car. Later, there was news of her beating and torture under custody¹⁴. The severity of her torture placed her in a hospital. Since the security forces wanted to take her from the hospital, the Azerbaijani community in the diaspora attempted to raise awareness about her and bring all eyes to her. However, given Neda's sex, ethnicity, and place of birth, she was not deemed newsworthy by many media outlets. Neda was killed, and the government tried to make her story disappear by creating a fake persona named Azam Amandi. While the Azerbaijani community may remember Neda, most do not.

Throughout these protests, the international community has become familiar with the diversity of Iran. However, Azerbaijani Turks have explicitly been left out of the narrative. When victims gained international momentum, many media outlets ensured to include their ethnic backgrounds, such as the Kurdish ethnicity of Mahsa Amini and the Baluch ethnicity of Faezeh Barahui. However, the same was not done for the Azerbaijani women. For instance, Hadis Najafi was a Turkic Azerbaijani killed during the early days of the protests with several bullets by the security forces and became one of the most known names. Her ethnicity was left out of the reports. Another example can be seen through the brave act of Elnaz Rekabi¹⁵, an international climber who took off her hijab when competing in South Korea to show her support for her sisters. While this news was widespread, her ethnicity or the Azerbaijan region she came from was consistently omitted from the stories.

3.3 Fair trial and its violations in nationwide protests

A fair trial in an impartial court based on the law is considered a human right and is emphasized in the UN's Declaration of Human Rights. Unfortunately, Iran's judicial system has become one of the arms of suppressing the protesters and has violated the principles and standards of fair proceedings in Iran's nationwide protests with the motto of "woman, life, freedom". Iran's judicial system, including courts and prosecutors' offices and forensic doctors, has been in extensive and close cooperation with the security and intelligence forces of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps, the Ministry of Intelligence, and the police force in suppressing the civil protesters who peacefully protested the government killing of Ms. Jina Mahsa Amini. The protestors were peaceful, without carrying weapons and with empty hands.

In this report, relying on personal observations and experiences as a lawyer, as well as by verifying media news and the reports of some detained people in East Azerbaijan province and especially Tabriz city, an attempt has been made to make a report as an impartial observer about the violation of the principles of a fair trial.

3.3.1 Stage I: Arrests and case filings

The methods of arresting people during the nationwide protests have been done in different ways, and the common denominator of all of them is violence and beating during the arrest. Many people have been arrested during protests in the streets, individually or collectively, and usually injured due to shotgun wounds and even with military bullets in different parts of their bodies. Urban security cameras, security forces, or telecommunication systems detected some of them during street protests. They were violently arrested with the large-scale invasion of security agents at their homes and places of residence.

Also, many of those injured by shotgun bullets, who were mainly injured in the eye area, have been arrested and detained after being transferred to hospitals and health centers, with the report of the heads of hospitals and health centers to the security forces.

One of the principles of fair proceedings is informing people that they are being prosecuted through a written summons, which is even mentioned in the criminal laws approved by the Islamic Republic of Iran. But unfortunately, in the recent protests, the security forces and judges did not respect these laws.

After the arrest, people were transferred to unofficial detention centers and places, many of which are still unknown to us, and they were tortured to obtain confessions. Many detainees confessed to the security forces under physical and mental torture. Unfortunately, many of the detainees could not resist because they were ordinary citizens who objected to the governance of the Islamic Republic and were not political or civil activists, etc., as they were not familiar with their civil rights.

Preliminary investigations are fundamental in judicial proceedings and form the basis of the criminal case, and judges usually issue judgments based on those investigations. Therefore, there were no legal effects in the initial interrogations of the protesters, who were generally forced to confess with all kinds of torture. Still, the prosecutor's offices and courts proceeded to issue convictions against the protesters, despite knowing about the physical and mental tortures applied by the security forces. In some cases, the investigators issued orders to torture the accused protestors.

On the other hand, since the accusations against the detainees had not yet been proven, the security forces were not allowed to arrest and deprive them of their freedom. At the same time, this criterian of the principles of fair trial has also been violated. Additionally, the defendants have not been allowed to meet and make phone calls with their families and lawyers. Many female detainees with small children could not talk to their children either.

In general, the rights of the accused have been violated from the moment of arrest by the security forces to the time of handing over to the judicial authorities. Examples of such violations are the deprivation of the accused's freedom, torture to obtain a confession, the impossibility of meeting and talking to the family on the phone, not informing the family of the place of arrest, lack of warning about having the right to remain silent and the right to have a lawyer and to be informed of the reasons and documents of the imputation accusation.

3.3.2 Stage II: Preliminary investigations and prosecutions

In this part of the procedure, the cases of accused and arrested protestors were referred to the judicial authority. The rest of the preliminary investigations were conducted under the supervision of the prosecutor and assistant prosecutor. Even at this stage, the defendants were still deprived of the right to a lawyer, and they did not even know about the contents of their case and the evidence and documents collected against them. The proceedings were conducted confidentially and not publicly. By doing so, the judicial system of the Islamic Republic of Iran was silently suppressing the protesters.

In several cases, we saw in the reports about the hostage-taking of a member of the accused's family, such as the arrest of the accused's mother, which the prosecutor's office did. In addition, some protestors who insisted on their opinions or did not sign the confession requested by the security forces issued permission to be tortured by the security forces with judicial orders such as "technical interrogation of the accused".

In addition, the criminal security orders corresponding to the charges of the detained persons were either not issued or executed despite the issuance. For example, many people were not released from custody even though bail was given. One of the reasons for this was the presence of torture marks on the faces and bodies of the detainees, and they did not want the torture marks to be documented by lawyers and human rights activists and sent to international forums.

Considering that the defendants did not know the contents of the case and the reasons for the charges and their lawyers did not have access to the case, the proceedings in the prosecutor's office resulted in the issuance of a guilty verdict based on forced confessions and torture.

3.3.3 Stage III: Proceedings in court

At this stage, the trial courts were held without a jury, which is even required by the Civil law of the Islamic Republic. There were several cases of underaged detainees who were under 18. Their trial was in the Revolutionary Court instead of the special children's court, without observing international conventions and domestic laws.

At this stage, the defendants were still deprived of the right to have a lawyer, and court judges often did not pay attention to the statements and defenses of the accused protestors. The verdicts are only based on the reports from the security forces and the confessions obtained under severe torture. The judges proceeded to issue verdicts and punish the protesters unfairly and not in conformity with the judicial law.

3.4 Arrested Lawyers

Simultaneously with the death in custody of Ms. Mahsa Amini, lawyers joined the protests and defended the right of the people to hold peaceful gatherings on social media. Some of the Bar Association's member lawyers supported the protesters by issuing statements in line with their social responsibility to protect the right to peaceful assembly. In the early days of the protests, the East Azerbaijan province's Bar Association issued a statement condemning the illegal actions of the Moral Police, demanded the cessation and dismantling of the unlawful institution of Moral Police, and asked the judiciary to prosecute the perpetrators of the death of Ms. Jina Mahsa Amini in a transparent and legal investigation. Also, the Permanent Secretariat for the Prohibition of Discrimination and Violence against Women, located in the East Azerbaijan Bar Association, issued a statement condemning any violence against women and announced its readiness to investigate the dimensions of the issue¹⁶.

With the continuation of protests and the presence of different groups in the streets, the government suppressed the protesters with force and arrested many people. According to the statements of the investigators and prosecutors of the 7th, 12th, 17th, 15th, and 16th investigation branch departments of Tabriz city, more than 1700 protestors were arrested in the first two weeks of the protests in Tabriz city alone. The aforementioned judicial authorities confirmed the number of detainees in a meeting with the head of the Human Rights Commission of the East Azerbaijan Bar Association and the vice-chairman of this commission present at the meeting. On October 12, 2022, due to the high number of people arrested in Tabriz city and the families of the arrested persons referring to the lawyers' offices and the building of the East Azerbaijan Bar Association, the human rights commission of this association decided to hold an urgent meeting. In this meeting, Mr. Hossein (Sina) Yousefi, the vice-chairman of the Human Rights Commission, proposed the formation of a "Defense Committee" for the legal protection of the detainees, and other members approved this matter of the commission. Mr. Yousefi announced the issue of the formation of the defense committee on his Twitter account based on the decision of the commission members¹⁷.

After the widespread publication of the interference of the Human Rights Commission of East Azerbaijan on social media, the Judiciary's Intelligence Protection Organization of East Azerbaijan arrested Hossein (Sina) Yousefi on the charge of "forming an illegal group to support the rioters and propaganda against the Islamic Republic of Iran". Along with Sina Yousefi, three other lawyers were also arrested. Amir Mahdipour, Ghasem Boedi, and Negin Kiani were among the other detained lawyers from East Azerbaijan who had supported the right to peaceful assembly of the protesters on social media. These lawyers were accused of "propagandizing against the system and disrupting public order by encouraging people to riot"¹⁸.

The lawyers mentioned above were temporarily released from the Central Prison of Tabriz after being held in solitary confinement for several weeks without access to a lawyer and under a ban on talking and meeting. The indictment of these lawyers was issued by the 7th Branch of the Prosecutor's Office by Hadi Ghafourian, and the case was sent to the first branch of the Revolutionary Court of Tabriz, headed by Daoud Hamlbar Mojarrad. A court was held for each of the lawyers. Without the right to choose a designated lawyer and access to the content of the case, they were sentenced to prison, banned from leaving the country, and their electronic devices confiscated. The 32nd branch of the Court of Appeal of East Azerbaijan province, contrary to the explicit regulations of the Criminal Code of Procedure, without holding a hearing, approved the decisions issued, and the lawyers' case has been sent to the 11th branch and they have been summoned so that their sentence can be executed¹⁹.

In addition to the arrested lawyers, the Judicial Intelligence Protection Organization Office summoned more than 50 other lawyers and forced them to confess in front of the camera by threatening to arrest, urging them not to participate in protests, refuse to defend the arrested protestors. Also, by sending a 17-paragraph letter containing the names of more than 52 lawyers, the Judicial Intelligence Protection Organization Office asked the Bar Association's Disciplinary to take disciplinary action against the protesting lawyers. When the issue was brought up in the board of directors of the East Azerbaijan Bar Association meeting, the prosecutor of the bar association, Mr. Omid Rahnamaei Sedigh Azar, opposed the issue, and the chairman of the board of directors of the bar association (Mr. Hassan Pashazadeh) forced him to resign from his position. After this change in the disciplinary committee of the Bar Association, the newly appointed head started filing disciplinary action against the protesting lawyers²⁰.

In addition, another Azerbaijani Turk lawyer named Mohammad Reza Fagihi was arrested by the security forces on the charge of disturbing public order at the same time as the sit-in and gathering in front of the building of the Tehran's Bar Association on October 12, 2022, and after enduring several days of solitary confinement on October 25, 2022, have been temporarily released on bail, and his case is still proceeding²¹.

After providing legal support to the arrested protestors, Amir Afshar Najafi and Reza Hamzei, Qazvin's Bar Association member lawyers, were sentenced to prison and banned from practicing law by Qazvin Revolutionary Court. Amir Afshar Najafi was arrested on October 25, 2022, and an indictment was issued by the 10th branch of the Qazvin Prosecutor's Office based on the accusations of "sharing false content", "inciting people to participate in riots", and "propagandizing against the Islamic Republic of Iran". The 108th branch of the Criminal Court of Qazvin and the first branch of the Revolutionary Court of Qazvin sentenced Mr. Najafi to 17 months in prison, two years of ban on working as a lawyer, two years of ban on leaving the country and confiscation of electronic devices²².

Mr. Reza Hamzei has been sentenced by the first branch of the Qazvin Revolutionary Court to one year of imprisonment and two years of prohibition from working as a lawyer. Mr. Hamzei's hearing was held on November 20, 2022, and the verdict was communicated to him on November 29²³.

Filed cases against the lawyers of Qazvin city have been widespread. Besides them, six other lawyers from Qazvin, including the chair of the Qazvin Bar Association, were sentenced. Seyyed Mohammad Hosseini, chair of the Qazvin Bar Association, has been sentenced to a fine by the criminal court of Qazvin for "publishing lies and false content". Ms. Fariba Rezaei, another lawyer of the Qazvin Bar Association, was sentenced to 6 months in prison, two years of being banned from working as a lawyer, and two years of being banned from leaving the country by the first branch of the Qazvin Revolutionary Court on the charge of "propaganda against the Islamic Republic of Iran."

Mohsen Naghdi, the internal director of the Qazvin Bar Association, has been sentenced to one year in prison, two years of being banned from working as a lawyer, and two years of being banned from leaving the country and confiscation of his mobile phone on the charge of "propaganda against the Islamic Republic of Iran."

Mr. Ebrahim Sabeti, another member of the Qazvin Bar Association, was also sentenced to one year in prison, two years of ban on practicing law, two years of ban on leaving the country, and confiscation of his mobile phone by the first branch of the Revolutionary Court of this city on charges of "propaganda against the Islamic Republic of Iran."

For Ms. Maryam Aghabeigi, another Qazvin Bar Association member, the judge has ordered suspending the prosecution.

Mr. Alireza Mafi has been tried on the charge of "propaganda against the Islamic Republic of Iran" in the Revolutionary Court of this Qazvin. Still, the extent of his conviction is not known. To control the situation and create fear, the security institutions and judicial authorities are trying to discourage lawyers from doing their regular job by suppressing them and increasing the cost of defending the protesters for lawyers. For this reason, they file new cases for lawyers in addition to the previous ones. Sina Yousefi, who was previously accused of "propaganda against the Islamic Republic of Iran" and the first branch of the Revolutionary Court sentenced him to six months in prison, two years of a travel ban, and confiscation of electronic devices, is now facing another charge under the title of "forming an illegal group" for forming a committee to defend protesters. According to Article 286 of the Islamic Penal Code, he may be recognized as a Corruption on Earth and sentenced to death. In the best-case scenario, considering similar cases, he may be sentenced to a long time in prison. Since the beginning of the protests, the Islamic Republic has tried and convicted many people to death in a quick and urgent proceeding, illegally and without access to a lawyer.

3.5 Torture and forced confessions

Another example of human rights violations regarding the detainees of the recent protests in Iran, which was widely repeated many times, is torture during the arrest and trial stages and obtaining forced confessions. Article 38 of the Constitution of the Islamic Republic of Iran prohibits torture, and the resulting confession is considered invalid. On the other hand, Article 578 of the Islamic Penal Code, supplemented by Article 58 of the Ta'zirat Law, provides a specific punishment for government officials and judicial or civilian officials who forced the accused to confess under torture. Also, by approving the Prohibition of Torture Law on May 8, 2002, the legislator has included all kinds of psychological torture in the definition of torture. In this way, it is forbidden to use any torture during interrogations. For example, keeping the accused in solitary confinement and investigating and interrogating him under pressure and unusual conditions such as interrogation with blindfolds or tied hands and feet, or investigation and interrogation at night for a long time in such a way as to prevent the accused from sleeping and the use of insulting words in interrogations are all considered as "torture" and are against the legal provisions of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

Besides the prohibition of torture in internal laws, torture is also prohibited internationally. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights emphasizes the prohibition of torture in article 5. Also, Article 7 of the Covenant of Civil and Political Rights confirms this, and the Islamic Republic of Iran, as a member of the United Nations and ratifier of this covenant, must comply with it.

Despite these laws, in recent months and with the rise of street protests against the compulsory hijab in Iran, many cases of violation of the rights of accused and prisoners have been reported. Also, many reports about the torture of prisoners during detention, the investigation and trial stage, and especially the forced confessions have been written from all over Iran. Following are some examples of torture and forced confession by the Islamic Republic of Iran during the nationwide protest in 2022.

As mentioned in section "Underaged victims of violence in Iran" of this report, Atila Arfai, a 16 year old student in Tabriz, was arrested during the protests. One of the citizens arrested in the Tabriz protests, who was in the same cell with Atila Arfai, told his family that his nose was broken and various parts of the face and body of this 16-year-old teenager were injured and bruised after the severe beating of the interrogators. Beatings were in the form of slapping, kicking, and punching him. According to the cellmate of Arfaei in the detention center, which was released on bail sometime after his arrest, Arfaei suffered serious physical and mental injuries due to continuous torture in the Tabriz Intelligence Guard detention center and needed urgent medical care, which security forces did not provide any. Also, Arfaei's asthma worsened due to a lack of access to his medicines during detention.

Arfaei's case has been sent to Branch 15 of Tabriz General and the Revolution Prosecutor's Office (Tabatabai Complex), and the case investigator has issued a bail of 400 million tomans for him. Despite this and despite Arfaei's family securing bail, the authorities of this prosecutor's office told the family that "the Tabriz IRGC's information prevents the temporary release of Atila on bail."

Arfaei was accused of "organizing and encouraging citizens to riot through social media", "leading street riots," and "damaging public property"; According to Arfaei's cellmate in Tabriz Intelligence Detention Center, the accusations were made after interrogators checked his WhatsApp messages. The cellmate indicated that Arfaei's fluency in Turkish language and having photos of non-Iranian figures caused the "suspicious-ness" among the interrogators to accuse him of organizing the protests as a "foreign spy".

Arfaei was denied access to a lawyer during the interrogation. After insisting for weeks, the authorities agreed to execute the temporary release issuance of the Prosecutor's Office on October 12, 2022. After the temporary release, Arfaei mentioned that the interrogators tortured him by putting his feet into water and gave consecutive electric shocks to him.

Heydar Azimi Qiyebashi²⁴ was arrested in December 2022 during street protests in Tabriz. On a phone call with his family, he informed them about his arrest and presence in Tabriz Intelligence Department. According to local sources, Mr. Azimi was pressured to confess his involvement in the death of Hossein Ojaghi, a Basij force member, in Tabriz. Mr. Azimi died in custody under pressure to confess. His corpse was handed over to his family on January 2, 2022. The security forces of the Islamic Republic of Iran have threatened the deceased's family to remain silent about this incident and they prevented the gathering of the Seventh Funeral Ceremony of him.

In the recent protests, several citizens arrested on the pretext of "participating in the killing of Basij forces", forces who played an active role in suppressing the protests, were tried and sentenced to death. The death sentences of several protesters tried with similar charges in a hasty and unclear manner have been executed²⁵.

Mohammad Nasiri²⁶, a 21-year-old student, was arrested in Qazvin on November 12, 2022, after the "free hugs" protest movement and distributing chocolates to the people in the street. Beatings and use of excessive force accompanied Nasiri's arrest. Mohammad Nasiri and his friends supported the protests with the free hugs initiative. He faced baseless accusations. Qazvin Province Central Radio broadcasted his forced confessions, which reported on the efforts of the security forces to prepare to accuse him of being a Moharebeh (Waging war against God). According to the laws of the Islamic Republic of Iran, the punishment for Moharebeh is death. Due to the lack of transparency and the use of torture on detainees to obtain forced confessions, Mohammad Nasiri is among the detainees at risk of the death penalty.

Tohid Darvishi²⁷, a 35-year-old from Garnavik village in Khoy district, was arrested by IRGC Intelligence Organization in Tabriz on October 15, 2022. According to the sources, Darvishi has been under torture for more than two months in the intelligence detention center of Tabriz. According to the testimony of Mr. Darvishi's family, he was subjected to severe torture during his detention to force a confession. Finally, under these pressures, he confessed to setting fire to a bank building during street protests in Tabriz and participating in the murder of a Basij force. Darvishi, who was deprived of the right to access a lawyer under the pressure of the case's judge, was tried on the charge of Moharebeh. The case judge verbally informed his family of the death sentence without going through the legal process. Considering several death sentences related to protesters have been executed in the past months, this citizen is also at risk of imminent execution. Mr. Darvishi is currently being held in the central prison of Tabriz, where he suffers from a mental condition.

arrested Arvid Garne²⁹, a 66-year-old German citizen, on October 18, 2022. He has been in detention for months and has been charged with "taking pictures of prohibited areas". Due to the conditions of Ardabil detention centers and a large number of arrested people, the rights of the accused have not been respected, and he has been tortured.

3.6 The right to peaceful assembly

Street protests are one of the most used contentious civil methods by the Iranian people. Especially considering that the limitations of fair political participation in Iran have practically removed the people's will from practicing their democratic rights; The street is the only place for people to express their opinion. But this only way has always been associated with a very high cost. For this reason, one of the essential topics after every public demonstration in Iran is the right to protest and peaceful assembly.

Article 20 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights under the title "Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association", "No one may be compelled to part of an association", and Article 21 of the International Civil and Political Covenant states that "The right of peaceful assembly shall be recognized" have emphasized the right to freedom of assembly and the Islamic Republic of Iran as a ratifier of these documents is required to comply with it. In addition, this right has also been recognized in the internal laws of the Islamic Republic, despite all the shortcomings and flaws. For example, Article 27 of the Constitution of the Islamic Republic of Iran states, "Public gatherings and marches may be freely held, provided arms are not carried and that they are not detrimental to the fundamental principles of Islam."

Although the constitution does not provide any conditions for obtaining a permit for gatherings, the Islamic Council passed laws that made holding gatherings subject to getting a permit from the Ministry of Internal affairs. According to the opinion of many jurists, the requirement to obtain a permit is against the constitution. Considering that no law can limit the constitution in any way, it is also unacceptable to restrict the freedom of peaceful assembly.

Nonetheless, by examining all the domestic and international laws that the Islamic Republic is committed to implementing, there is no doubt that the right to freedom of peaceful assembly should be respected as one of the citizens' inalienable rights. However, the Islamic Republic's approach to non-governmental and public gatherings has consistently violated these rights. In the recent protests, the government violated these rights widely. Especially since the Islamic revolution, no permission has been issued for independent and non-governmental protest gatherings.

In the recent street protests that started with the protest against the compulsory hijab and the suppression of individual freedoms and spread throughout the country, hundreds of detainees have been tried and convicted for participating. For example, more than 18 Moharebeh and Corruption on Earth cases were filed against protesters. In these cases, more than 44 protesters were accused of Moharebeh and confronting the Islamic government or were sentenced to death³⁰.

In the cities of Azerbaijan, where suppression has been observed to prevent the formation of street protests, the government has taken forceful action against the activists preparing to attend the protest rally. For example, in the first days of nationwide protests after the death of Mahsa Amini, security agents detained two Azerbaijani Turk civil activists, Asgar Akbarzadeh and Saeed Sadeghifar, on September 22, 2022, in Ardabil³¹ and kept them under custody for several days. In objection to the death penalty verdict of, some protestor's families and relatives intended to hold protests. However, security forces prevented them from gathering for the peaceful protest³². As mentioned in the previous sections, it was confirmed that more than 1700 people were arrested during the protests only in Tabriz. Some activists did not even participate in street protests among these people but their previous activism was seen as a "potential threat". Thus, the security forces raided their houses, confiscated their devices, and transferred them to prison.

3.7 Disproportionate use of force

The Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials was adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations under resolution 34/169³³. This covenant was built based on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It includes basic principles to protect individuals' civil and political rights while enforcing a list of boundaries to the privileges of law enforcement agencies and their officers.

Following Article 2, "In performing their duty, law enforcement officials shall respect and protect human dignity and maintain and uphold the human rights of all persons". National and international laws identified and protected the mentioned human rights. Article 3 of this treaty states, "Law enforcement officials may use force only when strictly necessary and to the extent required for the performance of their duty". This article sets two restrictions on the use of force. Firstly, it allows the use of force; However, it limits the use of force to exceptional cases. Secondly, in those exceptional scenarios, it is only permitted under the principle of proportionality. This conduct also emphasizes the use of firearms and considers it an extreme measure that should be avoided, especially against children. Article 6 highlights the duties of the officials to protect the health of the persons in their custody and provide immediate medical attention when needed.

By examining the protests that have taken place across this country starting in September of 2022, various violations of fundamental human rights and excessive use of force against civilians by law enforcement agencies can be seen. It is important to note that the term "law enforcement" and "security forces" are umbrella terms in this report to refer to various agencies in Iran, not just the local police officers. The Iranian government has directed the militarization of local forces and has pulled forces from various security agencies to wholly and violently suppress the uprisings. Based on an overwhelming mountain of evidence from videos, photos, interviews, witnesses, lawyers, victims' family members, and more, Iranian authorities have ruthlessly been cracking down on protestors and even civilian bystanders. Specifically, in northwest Iran, where ethnically Azerbaijani Turks live (West Azerbaijan, East Azerbaijan, Ardabil, Zanzan, Qazvin, etc.), numerous human rights violations have been observed.

³³Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials, G.A. res. 34/169, annex, 34 U.N. GAOR Supp. (No. 46) at 186, U.N. Doc. A/34/46 (1979). A/RES/34/169. Read more at this webpage.

These violations against peaceful protestors include but are not limited to lethal force, unlawful arrests, and disproportionate use of force by the security forces. They have been physically assaulting protestors by slapping, punching, kicking, dragging them on the floor, hitting them with batons, bending their knees on the bodies of protestors, hitting their heads constantly, etc. Such treatments violated articles 2 and 3. Major widespread violations include the use of firearms such as shotguns, assault rifles, and handguns. Law enforcement agencies were shooting at protestors and firing at those running away from the back³⁴.

Although there are hundreds of examples of violations of Article 6 where injured individuals were left to bleed on the streets, refusal of officers to provide medical attention when needed, and even murder of individuals under custody, one of the ways that article 6 was blatantly violated was through the use of ambulances. The security officers used empty ambulances rather than police cars to suppress the protests. The injured protesters would approach those ambulances seeking immediate help. But, instead of finding a medical team, law enforcement agencies would trap and detain them.

Furthermore, particular attention should be given to excessive force against children. The Iranian government and its agencies have killed over 71 children during these protests, where the loss of life could have been avoided³⁵. For instance, the case of Asra Panahi (2006-2022), who was murdered by a law enforcement division called "plainclothes" in her school. She was not in the streets protesting but within the safety of her school property. This teenager was killed as a result of several blows to the head. Mehrdad Ghorbani, Mahdi Mousavi, Esmail Heydari, and Hasti Hasanpour are on a list of underaged children murdered. Mehrdad Ghorbani and Mahdi Mousavi lost their lives due to the direct shootings of security officers.

Iranian-based human rights organizations in Iran and diaspora and international organizations such as Amnesty International³⁶ and Human Rights Watch (HRW)³⁷ have brought attention to these issues. While there are no concrete statistics regarding the death toll due to the lack of data collection agencies in Iran and the government's deliberate attempts at prohibiting the spread of news by suspending internet usage and threatening individuals from coming forward, it is estimated to be over 525 individuals. These are 525 deaths that could have been avoided if there was not the excessive use of force by security officials.

3.8 Arbitrary detention

Arbitrary detention is a widespread problem in Iran, where the authorities have been criticized for violating the human rights of individuals and depriving them of their liberty without due process of law. During the nationwide protests in the Azerbaijani region of Iran, there have been numerous reports of individuals being arrested and detained without charge, often in connection with their political views or previous activities. The Iranian government has been accused of using arbitrary detention to suppress political dissent and intimidate opposition groups. The country's intelligence agencies have been known to use arbitrary detention as a way of coercing individuals into confessing to crimes they did not commit. In many cases, detainees have been held in incommunicado detention and subjected to torture or other ill-treatment.

In Iran, Article 32 of the Constitution and Article 71 of the Ta'zir law have been widely violated in recent years, particularly in the country's political climate and widespread human rights abuses.

Article 32 of the Iranian Constitution states that "no one may be arrested except by the order and following the procedure laid down by law. In case of arrest, charges with the reasons for accusation must be communicated and explained to the accused in writing". It also stipulates that a provisional dossier must be forwarded to the competent judicial authorities within 24 hours so that the preliminary proceedings of the trial can be completed as swiftly as possible.

Despite this constitutional protection, there have been numerous reports of individuals being arrested and detained in Iran without due process and without being informed of the charges against them. In many cases, individuals have been held in incommunicado detention for extended periods and subjected to torture and other forms of ill-treatment. The arrest and detention of persons must be necessary to complete the investigation. Holding the accused for more than 24 hours is not legally authorized and will expose the perpetrator to the punishment specified in article 570 of the Islamic Penal Code. According to Article 53 of the Criminal Code of Procedure Law, judicial officers are required to record the statements of the detained, the duration of the interrogation, the date and time it began, the rest period between two interrogations, and the date and time the person was introduced to judge. Executive guarantee for violation of article 53 by law enforcement officers is dismissal from government service for three months to one year according to article 63 of the same law.

Article 71 of the Ta'zir law states that any person, including authorities or government officials, who seizes or imprisons a person without a warrant from the competent authorities will be imprisoned for six months to 3 years. However, despite this legal protection, we, as AHRAZ, received numerous reports of Azerbaijani Turk individuals being arbitrarily arrested and detained in Iran, often without a warrant or being informed of the reasons for their detention.

All the names mentioned in the list at the end of this report were arbitrarily detained and arrested considering the aforementioned regulations of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

3.9 Access to the Internet and Data

From its development until today, internet usage has been widespread. While a few decades ago, it may have been a leisure consumption for those with access, today, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR)³⁸ supports the declaration of internet access as a fundamental human right. Article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights states that the internet has become an essential medium for various tasks. OHCHR even released the "Report of the Special Rapporteur on the Promotion and Protection of the Right to Freedom of Opinion and Expression,"³⁹ outlining the significance of internet access in the 21st century, the restrictions of content on the internet, and the necessity of infrastructure⁴⁰.

The internet is a tool that grants privileges of knowledge, communication, management, entertainment, and more. Just like any other tool, the internet can also be weaponized to use against people. The internet has become such a necessary tool of living that its mere absence can be problematic. Shutting down the internet where most of a given region loses access has become a common tactic oppressive governments use⁴¹, and⁴². This serves many purposes, like controlling the flow of information and prohibiting further assembly and organization of citizens by violating freedom of expression and assembly⁴³.

Iran is no stranger to this tactic, and this can especially be seen through the protests that began in September of 2022. Even though Iran already restricts its citizens' internet usage by censoring which applications and websites can and cannot be accessed, during protests, they completely shut down the internet so that there is no access at all⁴⁴.

From the perspective of Iranians, an internet shutdown means a lack of communication with each other. As social media and other communication applications like Instagram, Whatsapp, and Telegram have become the leading connectivity platforms, the absence of the internet means silence for many. People can no longer communicate freely with each other⁴⁵. The internet allows people to connect and coordinate across cities, so mobilization becomes troublesome without it. It also enables the government to quickly crackdown on the groups before they can grow and hold momentum. The strategy of divide and conquer is much easier when the groups are unaware of the safety of their friends and family. The internet provides anonymity to the individuals planning protests against the regime, making it difficult for the government to track them. Home phones and physical meetings are easier to track and disassemble.

Additionally, those who rely on the internet for non-political reasons are affected negatively. For instance, online students could no longer attend classes, study, and submit homework. Workers who use the internet for communication, shipment, and support were at a loss. Those running online businesses no longer had a platform for their customers.

From a broader perspective, large-scale and complete internet disconnection prohibits the flow of information within Iran and isolates Iranians from the world. Restricted access means the only source of information becomes the government-owned and controlled media outlets where misinformation regarding the reasons behind protests, their magnitude, and their status can be downplayed. Furthermore, it prohibits an accurate collection of data and facts. The security forces of Iran have been violently suppressing the protests in the country through physical and mental abuse, torture of those arrested, rape and sexual assault of women and minors, usage of excessive force and firearms, and killing people, including children, by directly firing at them. A complete internet shutdown obstructs research into human rights violations and crimes committed.

Moreover, it allows for the spread of misinformation within and outside Iran. For instance, during the protests, a lie began circulating that the government abolished the morality police. This news continued circulating and was only discredited days later because many internal sources could neither confirm nor deny this information due to the lack of access to the internet. By cutting the internet, the government also breaks the flow of international support. People can no longer share their stories and struggles with the diaspora or the international community. Without the internet, the government can thoroughly conduct its business without interference from the inside or outside country⁴⁶.

3.10 Arbitrary deprivation of life

Arbitrary deprivation of life, or the taking of life without due process of law, is a severe violation of human rights and is prohibited by several international legal instruments, including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR). According to Article 3 of the UDHR, "Everyone has the right to life, liberty, and security of person." This right is also guaranteed under Article 6 of the ICCPR, which states that "Every human being has the inherent right to life. This right shall be protected by law. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life."

Despite these protections, there have been numerous reports of arbitrary deprivation of life in Iran, particularly in the context of the government's crackdown on political opposition, human rights activism, and minority groups. This has included the death penalty, extrajudicial killings, and lethal force by security forces against individuals who pose no imminent threat to their safety. In many cases, individuals have been arrested and detained without due process and subjected to torture and other ill-treatment while in custody. This has included solitary confinement, psychological abuse, and physical abuse, including beatings and electric shocks. In some cases, individuals have been executed after trials widely criticized as fundamentally unfair and lacking in due process.

The charges of "Moharebeh" and "Efsad Fel Arz," which translate to "waging war against God" and "spreading corruption on earth," are considered among the most severe charges in the Islamic Republic of Iran. Before 2013, these charges were considered one crime under a single article. The charges stated that anyone who used weapons to cause fear or harm public security was considered a "Mohareb" (a person committing Moharebeh) and guilty of "spreading corruption on earth." However, since adopting amendments in 2013, "spreading corruption" has been separated as a standalone crime and defined differently. This has resulted in judges abusing the two charges to target peaceful critics, as the definition of "spreading corruption on earth" is vague.

Article 279 of the penal code defines Moharebeh as "drawing a weapon on the life, property, or honor of people to cause terror." Article 504 includes anyone who encourages military personnel to rebel, escape, surrender, or disobey orders to overthrow the government or defeat national forces as a Mohareb. The punishment for Moharebeh can be hanging, crucifixion, amputation of the right hand and left foot, or banishment. The judge assigned to the case has discretion over which punishment to implement.

Iran claims that the charge of Moharebeh is only used for terrorist crimes, but this is not true. The Islamic Republic has used this charge against political activists, journalists, and its critics since the establishment of the Islamic Republic.

3.11 Ethnic discrimination and the extent of crack-down in the Azerbaijan region of Iran

The Azerbaijani regions of Iran have a rich history of political activism and have been at the forefront of many uprisings and revolutions in the country. Because of their large population and essential role in shaping the political landscape of Iran, the Azerbaijani regions have been subjected to heightened levels of ethnic discrimination, particularly in times of political unrest.

In the protests of 2022, the Azerbaijani regions experienced a particularly harsh crackdown by the security forces. Thousands of activists were arrested, even before they had a chance to participate in the protests, on suspicion of being a potential threat. This resulted in many illegal arrests, preventing many cities from forming street protests.

Despite the heavy-handed approach of the security forces, protests still took place in various cities across Azerbaijan. For instance, in Tabriz alone, there were over 1,700 protestors arrested by November 2022. In other cities, such as Mahabad, Oshnavieh, Urmia, and Ardabil, the security forces had a military presence on the streets, and there were reports of direct shootings at the protestors.

According to the footage published on social media by the protestors, the streets of some cities of West-Azerbaijan province in Iran were full of military vehicles. The situation in some cities was so tense that the security forces were in military formation. In one of the incidents in Mahabad, security forces shot at the crowd. The repression and arrests in other cities of West Azerbaijan, such as Prianshahr, Sulduz, Sardasht, Khoy, and Bukan, were also the same.

No excuse or reason can justify killing innocent people with the right to protest. Shooting directly at the protestors is equal to killing citizens by the Islamic Republic and cannot have any other justification. The observations and researches of AHRAZ and human rights organizations clearly show that the situation was not such that the government's actions were proportionate to the severity of the condition. At the same time, the government's efforts should not have conflicted with the government's commitments. The Iranian government has given its legal validity by committing itself to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. This means that the Islamic Republic cannot apply measures against the articles of this covenant except in emergencies.

In West-Azerbaijan, protesting people who participated peacefully in the protests were attacked by the security forces with war weapons. Therefore, there were no similar conditions, and the government's security organs could not make killing human beings normal by referring to a state of emergency. The rights of assembly and protest also state that peaceful protest and assembly is the right of every person. And suppose people raise their protest in a non-peaceful way instead of suppressing the protests. In that case, the government must keep these people away from the protests by observing the legal framework so that the protests and gatherings continue. However, the authorities of the Islamic Republic chose to shoot at them instead of opening the space for discussion about the people's legitimate complaints.

The level of violence used by the security forces in Azerbaijan was far greater than in other regions, highlighting the extent of the ethnic discrimination faced by Azerbaijani citizens in Iran. This raises serious concerns about the treatment of ethnic minorities in Iran and the ability of the government to address and resolve the underlying issues that lead to such protests.

3.12 Amnesty order

On February 09, 2023, Ali Khamenei, the leader of the Islamic Republic, agreed to a proposal by Gholamhossein Mohseni Ajei, the head of the country's judiciary, to grant amnesty and pardon the punishment of some of the protesters who had been detained. While some initially saw this decision as a positive step, human rights activists and organizations quickly criticized the move, calling it "hypocritical" and an attempt to deceive public opinion⁴⁷. As AHRAZ, we express concern that the Iranian authorities were using amnesty to deflect international criticism while continuing to violate the basic human rights of its citizens. Ali Khamenei's amnesty fell short of addressing the systematic human rights abuses that had taken place during the protests. Moreover, some activists were arrested again a month after their release by the amnesty order. Azerbaijani teachers' rights activist Zeynab Hamrang, pardoned by the amnesty order, was arbitrarily arrested on March 12, 2023. The security forces transferred her to an unknown place⁴⁸.

Furthermore, some activists also criticized the government for not taking any meaningful steps toward addressing the protests' root causes, such as the issue of compulsory hijab, social and political freedoms, widespread corruption, and improving economic conditions for the population. Despite the amnesty decision, the protests and the Iranian government's response to them remain a significant concern for the international community and human rights advocates. Masoud Setayeshi, the spokesman of the judiciary of the Islamic Republic, threatened the detained protesters and said that if they are subject to this "amnesty" and are released from prison, they will remain "under supervision and monitoring"⁴⁹. This security warning from a legal authority shows the close relationship between the judiciary of the Islamic Republic and security institutions, including the IRGC and the Ministry of Intelligence. One of the conditions announced for this amnesty is "expressing remorse and signing a written commitment" from the protesters.

Protesters lost their lives

4.1 Protesters lost their lives

After the nationwide demonstrations began in September 2022, the Islamic Republic of Iran's response to the protests was immediate and brutal. From the very first moments, the security agents, including Basij and IRGC forces, used any available tools to suppress the peaceful protests. Much footage and video reveal that the forces brutally beat the protesters during the arrests. The use of shotguns and military rifles has been recorded in various cases. The use of disproportionate and illegal forces in the regions inhabited by ethnic groups was alarming. Especially, cities populated by Balochi and Kurdish people experienced the most severe use of military weaponry during the protests. As a result of the disproportionate use of force, unfortunately, more than 500 Iranian citizens lost their lives. Balochis have experienced the highest number of casualties among all ethnic groups. Considering the threats from the Iranian intelligence forces on the families of the victims and the internet blockage by the government, estimating the exact number of victims was a challenging job. In several cases, the victims' families have denied their child's death under threat and pressure from the Iranian forces. In preparing this report, we also encountered challenges confirming the victims' ethnicity. We confirmed the ethnicity of the lost lives through social media posts of their family members and the footage from their funerals. Our association's main focus has been on the Azerbaijan region of Iran. Despite all the challenges, we can confirm the 15 cases of lost lives in the Azerbaijani-populated regions. The number of lost lives among Azerbaijani protesters would be much higher than the confirmed cases as the central region of Iran has at least %40 Azerbaijani Turks. Unfortunately, we did not have sufficient resources to confirm the victim's identity in the central region. We prepare this report based on the confirmed cases the 15 Azerbaijani victims' families announced. Additionally, we double-checked our report with other human rights violations reports.

Mehrdad Ghorbani, Mehdi Mousavi
— Shot dead in Zanjan

Mehrdad Ghorbani and Mehdi Mousavi: People in Zanjan joined the country-wide protests on September 21, 2022. The Basij, IRGC, Intelligence, and security forces intervened the protests aggressively and illegally using batons, threw tear gas, and fired directly at the protesters with shotguns. As a result of the aggressive actions, several protesters were injured, and some lost their lives during the protests. Mehrdad Ghorbani lost his life due to a direct shooting by the security agents on Wednesday, September 21, 2022. On the same day, another Azerbaijani protester Mehdi Mousavi was shot dead by the security forces in Zanjan. The local reports confirmed that Mehdi Mousavi¹, a 16 years old minor, was killed by five bullets and numerous baton blows to his head and body. According to the same reports, the authorities did not transfer Mehdi Mousavi's corpse to his family due to pressure from intelligence agents. The officers only allowed the family to attend his burial. Mehdi Mousavi's body was taken directly from the hospital to Behesht Zahra Cemetery in Zanjan and was buried without the presence of relatives and other citizens of Zanjan and only in the presence of a few members of his family. The security agents threatened Mehdi Mousavi's family that if they revealed that he was killed by the police officers of the Islamic Republic, they would also arrest and "eliminate" the other family members. Additionally, several people from Zanjan reported that three to five protesters were killed in the protests in Zanjan. However, we could not confirm the identities of the other victims.

Hadis Najafi
— Shot dead in Karaj

Hadis Najafi: ² According to the local reports, 23-year-old Hadis Najafi suffered many injuries from six bullets in her abdomen, neck, heart, and hand by the security forces in Karaj on September 21, 2022, and died after being transferred to Qaim Hospital in Karaj. Videos and photos have shown that victims were hit and shot in their heads. Fired war bullets killed Hadis Najafi. Her mother and sister said that when the security forces gave Hadis's corpse, they saw a bullet wound on her face. We could not confirm if she had prior activities regarding women's rights; however, she posted videos on her Instagram and TikTok account dancing to the latest viral trend, including Turkish pop music and Azerbaijani songs, which show that she was against the mandatory hijab. Her last Instagram story says, "I am going to the protests with excitement. A few years later, I want to look back and feel happy that I attended the protests and everything has changed." Unfortunately, hijabs are mandatory in public for all women in Iran, regardless of religion or nationality. Hadis, 23, was part of the new generation in Azerbaijan. She knew of women's and national rights, such as Azerbaijani culture. She loved sharing fashion on her Instagram, styling her hair with and without her hijab with Turkish captions and bio. In her Instagram Bio, she wrote, "Fill my place now if there is another me" in Turkish. She was a TikToker shot dead while protesting for women's rights and has become a symbol of the protests in Iran, especially among Azerbaijani Turks.

Heydari died due to a lack of medical attention after being shot by security forces on Hokm Abad street near Qazvin's Mellat Park. According to the information from his family members, he was shot near the hip on September 22nd. "The bullet hit him from a very close distance, and most likely, from behind, exiting from the other side of his body." The same source added that his family was unaware of what had happened to Javad Heydari until hours later when they took him to the hospital: "Javad died of blood loss. The report they gave to the family stated that he was taken to the hospital at 11:00, 3 hours after he was injured. Another story is that after they shot him, they took him to their headquarters, where he was kept for hours before the ambulance arrived. As far as I know, Javad was shot from behind because his family saw his body before his burial, and he had a huge wound, suggesting he was shot from a close range." Javad Heydari was transferred to "Shahid Rajaei" hospital in Qazvin about 3 hours after he was shot. Around 12pm, his wife calls his family to notify them that he had not returned home yet. Therefore, the delays in transferring him to the hospital most likely led to severe bleeding and death.

Es-mail Heydari was originally from Meshgin Shahr in Ardebil province. He was on his way to the bakery where he worked when he was shot dead amid street protests. According to his brother, Esmail Heydari was shot in his heart. The exit wound showed that an assault rifle was used, not a shotgun.

However, the Iranian government denied his murder and announced that he fell from the fourth floor of a building in the Valiasr district of Tabriz. The intelligence forces did not transfer his body to his family for a while. to treat him at the hospital. Nima died after several days of being locked up in a detention center. His body was later delivered to his family on November 5, 2022.
